My name is Katumba Badru Sultan, I am a photojournalist and that's my God given responsibility in this city. I have powers to observe, and report on whatever is happening in this beautiful city

While at my work I get to feel and see amazing things. I see people in love. I see humanity at its best. I capture these everyday moments and share them without giving people clues on what's happening. I hope that they can have the

My images are open for engagement to all, I don't make images I wouldn't want to My images are open for engagement to all, I don't make images I wouldn't want to be made about me. I respect people's privacy and dignity even in the worst case scenario.

Sometimes I struggle to see beauty because of the images I have been forced to consume.

When you see award winning photos from the continent, they are often of suffering, poverty and disease.

My work has been published worldwide. I have won several awards and what can I say, I am grateful.

I would love to see what you think of this images.

It seems like a fantasy but all this beauty is painted all over, on the streets.

These moments are not things you will see on your TV screens or your favorite newspapers
